SECURITY DOORS AND ENCLOSURES

UK WIDE

A joint venture with Hodgson Sayers has allowed Tegrel the opportunity to develop and manufacture a range of bespoke security doors and enclosures for various utility companies.

These enclosures are used to house electrical control equipment in remote areas and provide peace of mind for customers wishing to have secure assets.

These products have been thoroughly tested by the Building Research Establishment (BRE) in Watford, who certify the security strength of the door designs prior to Tegrel manufacturing. Extremely rigorous tests are performed to ensure the security of the product is not compromised.

Working closely with Hodgson Sayers, Tegrel continue to fabricate these units which dedicated field engineers install on site.

“Hodgson Sayers and Tegrel have worked closely together on various contracts over the last few years. During this time we have forged a close partnering relationship based on mutual trust, respect and honesty, knowing you have a very capable and like-minded company to continually develop ideas and collaborate with to generate efficiencies has and does create a vibrant culture and a “can-do” attitude which benefits both parties and ultimately the customer.
